HISTORY OF Monroe County, Michigan.

Written Expressly for this Atlas, by

EDWIN WILLITS,

MONROE, MICH.

Monroe County from 1696 until the treaty of 1763, between France and England, constituted a part of New France. Then it, with all the vast territory from the Gulf of St. Lawrence to the Mississippi, came under the control of the English. The French habitans had made settlements therein, but the great body of the regions of the Lakes was occupied by the Indians, in whom the original title was vested. The first white settler in Monroe county was Col. Francis Navarre. He came from Detroit in 1780. He obtained a nominal title from the Indians of about a half mile on the south bank of the River Raisin, in what is now the heart of the City of Monroe. In 1784, a considerable body of Frenchmen settled at the River Raisin, where in 1805 there were 121 distinct farms or settlements. There were some settlements on Sandy Creek, Stony Creek, and Otter Creek. Their only titles as against outsiders was a possessory title from the Indians, and their only internal legal rights were maintained by the laws of Canada, under which, by act of Parliament, they were "to hold and enjoy their property and possessions with all customs and usages related thereto." These "customs" were in part founded upon the "customs of Paris and ordinances of the French King," and in part upon a sort of common law which was the outgrowth of the exigencies of their life in the wilderness.

By the treaty of 1763, between England and the United States, the North-west territory was transferred to the latter, but England refused to withdraw her troops therefrom. In 1794, however, England agreed to deliver up all posts in said territory on or before June 1, 1796, which was done. In the meantime the United States had taken measures to extinguish the Indian title to a portion of the land. The Indians claimed that the United States had no right to cross the Ohio, and instigated by the English, formed a Confederacy to oppose any further settlement in this territory. In 1785, however, at Fort McIntosh, the United States made a treaty with the Wyandottas, Ottawas, Delaware and Chippewa Indians, by which a tract of land was ceded as follows: "The post of Detroit, with a district beginning at the mouth of the River Rosine (Baisin), on the West end of Lake Erie, and running West six miles up the Southern bank of said river, thence, northerly and always six miles west of the Strait, till it strikes Lake St. Clair." This title was confirmed by treaty of Fort Harmar in 1787, and again by treaty at Greenville in 1795. By treaty at Detroit in 1807, with the Indians, a still larger tract was ceded, to wit: Beginning at the Miami River of the lakes (the Maumee), thence up stream to the mouth of the Au Glaize (at Defiance, Ohio), thence North until it intersects a parallel of latitude drawn from the outlet of Port Huron; thence North-east to White Rock on Lake Huron, reserving three miles square on the River Raisin, at a place called Macon, where the Macon River falls into the River Raisin, about fourteen miles from the mouth of said River Raisin. This three miles square is the well known Macon Reservation of this county, and which was subsequently ceded by the Indians to the Church of St. Ann, of Detroit. In 1821, by treaty at Chicago, all west of the line of 1807 and south of Grand river, and east of Lake Michigan, except 484 square miles, was ceded.

In 1798, the whole of the State of Michigan constituted a county of the North-west territory, called the County of Wayne, and a Court of Common Pleas was held at Detroit, and the county sent one representative to the General Assembly at Chillicothe, O. In 1802, Michigan (then the County of Wayne), was annexed to the territory of Indiana. January 11th, 1805, Michigan became a separate territory, and William Hull was made Governor, and Augustus B. Woodward, Chief Justice, Frederick Bates, Associate Justice. July 3, 1805, the Governor, by proclamation, established the "District of Erie," bounded on the South by the State of Ohio; East by the eastern line of the territory; North by a line running west from the mouth of the river Huron, up stream on its north bank to its head; thence the nearest line to the Grand river, which "disembogues" itself into Lake Michigan, thence along the north bank thereof to Lake Michigan, and west by the west line of the territory. The first court in said District of Erie, was held by said Chief Justice, September 2d, 1805, at the house of John Baptiste Jeraume, on the north bank of the river Raisin, near where the railroads cross the river in the present City of Monroe. The following were the first grand jury called at that session of the court, to wit: John Anderson, Francis Navarre, Israel Ruland, Doctor Ethan Baldwin, Alexander Ewing, Isadore Navarre, Jaques Navarre, Joseph Menard, Joseph Robert, Isadore Robert, Jean Baptiste Couture, Jean B. Jeraume, Francis Mouton, Robert Navarre, Doctor Joseph Dazette, Joseph Jobin, Jean Baptiste Lasalle, Barney Parker, Jean Charet, Samuel Ewing, Samuel Egnew, and Joseph Rouget. The first case before the court was John B. Jeraume vs. Antoine Campeau. The lawyers were Elijah Brush and Solomon Sibley, of Detroit. November 1, 1807, the grand jury, all French settlers but one, made presentment to the court in the French language, among other things, "humbly praying the court to take into consideration those persons who have license to sell whiskey—that they shall not sell on the Sabbath." In 1805, the river Raisin was declared a public highway from the Indiana boundary to its mouth. November 21, 1815, Wayne county was established, including all the territory to which the Indian title had been extinguished, and County Court established, with one chief and two associate Justices. July 14, 1817, Monroe county was established, bounded north by the river Huron in part;

west by the then Indiana boundary line, and south by the State of Ohio, thereby including all of Lenawee and a portion of the present counties of Wayne and Washtenaw; and the County Court was to be held at such place not exceeding two miles from the home of Francis Lasalle, as the court might designate. September 4, 1817, the town of Monroe was established, and made the county seat of Monroe county. April 6, 1817, Gabriel Godfrey was authorized to build and maintain a toll-bridge across the river Huron for 25 years. December 1, 1817, means were provided to build a county jail. June 7, 1818, Probate Court for each county established, the judge to be appointed by the Governor. June 1, 1819, John Anderson, Oliver Johnson, and twelve others were authorized to build and maintain, for twenty five years, a toll-bridge across the river Raisin at Monroe, subject to purchase by the public after seven years. September 10, 1822, Monroe county was established as it now is (and including the disputed territory about out of which grew the Toledo war), but attached to it was the present county of Lenawee, and all the territory west to Lake Michigan, the Indian title to which was extinguished by the treaty of Chicago in 1821. June 30, 1824, seat of justice for Lenawee county established on plat recorded in Register's office, June 26th, 1824. But the county itself was not organized till Nov. 20, 1826; but all suits then pending before the Monroe County Court to be considered before that Court. April 13, 1825, the first Legislative Council established Monroe county as the 2d District with six members. April 19, 1825, La Plaisance Bay Harbor Company, organized by John Anderson and seven others. December 29th, 1826, our Delegate in Congress was instructed to protest against any change of the southern boundary of the State, a premonitory symptom of the Toledo war. March 19, 1827, Bank of Monroe organized by John Anderson, O. Johnson, H. Conant, and others. April 12, 1827, the village of Monroe was incorporated. April 12, 1827, Common Schools were established in each township. Branches taught, to include Latin, English and French. April 12, 1827, Monroe county was divided into the townships of Frenchtown, Monroe, Raisinville, Erie and Port Lawrence, the latter being what was afterwards the disputed territory. Before this division, there were only three townships, Frenchtown, Monroe and Raisinville. The first township meeting of Port Lawrence was held at the house of Eli Hubbard, and he was the first Supervisor from that township; and supervisors were continuously elected and constituted members of the Monroe county Board of Supervisors till the difficulties of the Toledo war. June 23, 1828, a territorial road was established from Port Lawrence to Adrian. Also, others from Monroe to Ypsilanti; from Monroe to Dexter, by way of Saline River and Saline Springs; and July 3, 1828, one from Monroe to Detroit. July 4, 1832, Congress passed an act, authorizing and establishing a turnpike from La Plaisance Bay to intersect, at some suitable point, the road from Detroit to Chicago, which turnpike was the following year laid out and built through the village of Dundee.

THE WAR OF 1812,

AND

THE MASSACRE OF THE RIVER RAISIN.

In the war of 1812, between England and the United States, the western out-posts, so reluctantly yielded by the former in 1796, were eagerly desired; and forming a coalition with the Indians, under the celebrated warrior, Tecumseh, the British made the then wilderness a scene of many barbarous outrages. The River Raisin was on the highway from the Ohio to Detroit, and became the scene of considerable military activity. The post at Detroit was the objective point of attack on the part of the British and Indians, and the point to be supplied and reinforced, on the part of the United States. In August, 1812, Detroit was threatened, and on the 16th of that month it was ingloriously surrendered by Gen. Hull. Previous to that time, Col. Brush had been sent from Ohio with a reinforcement and supplies, including 100 head of cattle, and had arrived at the settlement of the River Raisin, where they stopped, finding a large force of the enemy between them and Detroit. Col. Brush sent word to Gen. Hull (by James Knaggs, late of Monroe city, as he informed the writer), that he was at the Raisin. The messenger went by trail by the way of Ypsilanti, or what was afterwards that place, there being only a single building there at the time used as a trading post. By this means, he arrived the evening Gen. Hull sent out a detachment by the same trail, to meet Col. Brush, but finding that Brush had not moved, nor had orders to move it, returned to Detroit in time to find that that post had surrendered, including in the capitulation, this detachment and the one also at the Raisin, under Col. Brush; but the latter refused to accede to this surrender, and after getting such supplies as were necessary, he left with his whole force for Ohio. Silas Lewis, of Monroe, came to this county in 1808; enlisted with Hull at the age of 18; was active as one of his scouts, and on the 16th day of August, 1812, brought the news of Hull's surrender to Col. Brush. After the capitulation of Detroit, the British established a provincial government for Michigan, including, of course, the settlement on the Raisin. The savages ravaged the settlement without restraint. The United States sought to recover the ground so lost, and organized an army under Gen. Harrison. When he had reached Sandusky, he sent Gen. Winchester in advance to Mamsee, whence the latter had dispatched a foraging party to the Raisin, where they arrived January 18, 1813. On the 19th, Gen.

Winchester arrived there with about 1000 men. He was repeatedly warned by the French settlers, who had come from Malden on the ice, that Proctor and a large force of Indians were approaching; but, thinking that the force was largely magnified, and that in any event, the forces under Gen. Harrison would reach him before the attack, he paid but little heed to the warning. On the 22d, he was attacked by the enemy under Proctor and the noted Indian Chiefs, Round-Head and Split Bog. His headquarters were at the house of Col. Francis Navarre, the earliest settler on the Raisin, (at the spot where the residence of Dr. A. I. Sawyer now stands) where he was surprised, taken prisoner, and nearly his whole force captured. Many sought safety in flight, but were mostly overtaken by the Indians, and slaughtered between the Raisin and Plum Creek. The wounded and sick prisoners, together with some of the well, were left at the Raisin, the rest being taken to Malden, with the promise that sleds would be sent in the morning for those left behind. About sunrise the next morning, the Indians attacked the camp at the Raisin, and massacred nearly all those so left behind. The whole affair was a disgrace to the British army, and brought sorrow into many households in Kentucky, where most of the American force had enlisted.

THE TOLEDO WAR.

By the ordinance of 1787, a territory was contemplated, and by act of Congress, 1805, the Territory of Michigan was established, whose southern boundary should be "a line drawn East from the southerly bend or extreme of Lake Michigan, until it shall intersect Lake Erie." This was the true southern boundary, and included a strip of nine miles wide of what is now a portion of the State of Ohio, and what constituted the township of Port Lawrence, and a part of Monroe county, as heretofore mentioned. The present city of Toledo, formerly called Port Lawrence, is within this nine miles. The act of Congress of 1802, organizing the State of Ohio, allowed, in the event that the line above described crossed the Maumee south of its mouth, in which event it would leave Toledo in Michigan, the line to run from Lake Michigan to the most northerly cape of Maumee Bay, thereby intending, in any event, that the outlet of the Maumee, and that Toledo should belong to Ohio. The latter State had projected the Erie and Wabash Canal, whose terminus was at Toledo, and the enterprise being of great promise, it was important to retain its advantages to the State. Michigan had unquestionably the legal right to the territory in dispute; had held possession; had, unopposed, levied and collected taxes; appointed justices of the peace; elected officers, and had been recognized by the inhabitants as their legitimate superior, and a large majority still desiring to continue their old relations. In February, 1835, Ohio for the first time passed an act extending the jurisdiction of the State over the disputed tract; erected townships, and in April following, an attempt was made to elect town officers. February 12th, the Territorial Council of Michigan passed an act making it a criminal offence for any one to accept any office, or perform its duties under any authority other than Michigan or the United States. March 9th, Governor Mason, acting governor of Michigan, ordered Gen. Brown to hold the Michigan militia in readiness to resist any attempt on the part of Ohio to enforce its jurisdiction. Governor Lucas, of Ohio, raised 600 men, fully armed and equipped, and stationed them at Fort Miami. Governor Mason and Gen. Brown raised a larger force, and took and held possession of Toledo. On the General's staff were Capt. Henry Smith and Alpheus Felch, of Monroe. Warner Wing, of Monroe, was Colonel. Lewis Darrah, Esq., of Monroe, was captain of a full company, composed mostly of French residents of the county. His two lieutenants were Gabriel Bissonette and David Bissonette. Darrah had full uniform, with four rows of buttons in front, hat with red feather, with white tip, all of which he brought with him from Pennsylvania. In his gorgeous uniform he was the observed of all, and when he gave an order, his lieutenants would step out and shout it in French along the lines. Many then and afterwards distinguished citizens of Monroe county were participants in the "bloody fray." Governor Lucas, finding that he was outnumbered, and that his enemy were "spoiling for the fight," discreetly remained within the acknowledged limits of his State. After a while, commissioners from Washington arrived, and on their suggestion, Governor Lucas disbanded his forces. Gov. Mason did not. The matter was referred to President Jackson, and his Attorney General sustained Michigan. Gov. Lucas sought to survey the line. His party was arrested in part, and dispersed as to the rest. This created great excitement in Ohio. Ten thousand men responded to the call to arms. In the meantime, Michigan was enforcing her act, making it a crime to recognize Ohio officials; and the Sheriff of Monroe county made matters lively arresting and serving process of every conceivable nature upon citizens of Toledo. Space will not permit an extended description of the ridiculous and serious scenes and events of this "war." Suffice it to say that President Jackson, finding that matters were becoming serious, recommended to Gov. Mason a suspension of hostilities, but he would not yield. Then the President removed him. Gov. Lucas surreptitiously organized a Court in Toledo, and the judge fled, all in the night time. Moves and counter-moves were the order of the day. Finally, Michigan wanted to be a State, and organized one in due time, and applied to Congress for admission. Congress made it a condition that Michigan should surrender all claim to the disputed territory, and take in lieu thereof the Upper Peninsula. Michigan at first refused, but finally consented. Thus ended a war in which both sides were victorious.

HISTORY OF TOWNSHIPS IN MONROE COUNTY.

Township of Erie. Pop. 1405.

This Township was reorganized in 1827. By act of the Legislative Council, April 12, 1827, all that part of the County of Monroe, south of the South line of Monroe township and east of the East line of the township of Raisinville, south by the township No. 8, south of the base line, and taking in ranges 6, 7 and 8, East of the meridian, was set off as the township of Erie; and the first election was to be held at the house of Francois Cousino. These boundaries included all of the present townships of Lasalle, Erie, Bedford and Whiteford, except so much of the townships of Erie, Bedford and Whiteford as lies between the present Ohio line and the south line of said line of township No. 8—a strip about a half a mile in width—and which was, by the same act, included in the township of Port Lawrence, and so remained till after the Toledo war, when the State line was changed, as heretofore described, and this strip was in 1837 attached to the said townships. The first election was for Delegate to Congress held July 9, 1827, when Gabriel Richard, (Father Richard) received 114 votes; Austin E. Wing 5, and John Biddle, 1; and the next was July 16, 1829, when Gabriel Richard received 84, and John Biddle 14 votes. In the meantime and before another election, Lasalle had been organized, so that at the next election for Delegate to Congress July 14, 1831, Austin E. Wing received 21, and Joseph R. Williams, 63 votes. At the next election, July 11, 1833, Austin E. Wing received 77, and Lucius Lyon 4 votes. Prior to the organization of this township in 1827, the then township of Port Lawrence constituted a part of the township of Erie. The first supervisor, elected in the spring of 1827, was Levi Collier, who died during the year, and Antoine Lafountain was elected to fill the vacancy. John Mulks was elected for the year 1828; James Cornell for 1829, 1830, 1831, 1832, 1833, 1834, and 1835. July 21, 1828, some of the inhabitants of Erie appeared before the board and represented that in consequence of a freshet in the spring, their crops were so nearly destroyed, that they could not pay $50, ordered to be raised for roads and bridges, and the board repealed the order. From 1838 to 1842, there were no supervisors, their duties being performed by county commissioners. The township of Erie elected James Mulhollen supervisor in 1842, 1843, 1844, 1845 and 1846; Lewis H. Bailey in 1847, 1848 and 1849; Samuel Mulhollen in 1850.

Raisinville Township. Pop. 1891.

This was one of the five townships re-organized in 1827. The boundaries were not then changed, and included therein the present township of Raisinville, and the townships of Ida, Summerfield, Dundee, Milan, London, and Exeter. The first election in the spring of 1827, was held at the house of Luther Smith, at which Thomas P. Benjamin was elected supervisor. At an election July 9th, 1827, for Delegate to Congress, Gabriel Richard received 26, and Austin E. Wing, 24 votes. July 13, 1829, for the same office, Gabriel Richard received 38, and John Biddle, 19 votes; and for members of the Legislative Council there were cast for Wolcott Lawrence, 22; Laurent Durocher, 23; Darius Comstock, 48; Peter P. Ferry, 22; Daniel S. Bacon, 34, and Abraham Edwards, 11 votes. There were to be three members elected, in the two counties of Monroe and Lenawee, and the successful candidates were Messrs. Lawrence, Durocher and Edwards. July 11, 1831, at an election for Delegate to Congress, Austin E. Wing received 33, and Joseph R. Williams 4 votes; and for members of the Council, Darius Comstock, 25; Laurent Durocher, 4; Daniel S. Bacon, 28, and Peter P. Ferry, 18. There were to be two members elected from Monroe and Lenawee, including Hillsdale. In the whole district, Comstock (of Adrian) received 395; Bacon 435; Durocher, 536; and Ferry, 291,—the last three of Monroe. At the election, July 8, 1833, for delegate, Austin E. Wing received 43; Lucius Lyon, 6; and William Woodbridge, 4 votes. This election was held after London and Summerfield had been organized and taken off. Daniel S. Bacon, and Laurent Durocher were again voted for and elected members of the Council.

Riley Ingersoll, (then living, at what was afterwards Dundee,) was elected supervisor of Raisinville in 1828; Samuel Atkinson in 1829; Richard Metter in 1830 and 1831; Cyrus Everett in 1832; Norman D. Curtis in 1833; Eliphalet Clark in 1834; Norman D. Curtis in 1835; and Wm. M. Montgomery in 1836; George Younglove in 1842; John W. Wadsworth in 1843; Geo. Younglove in 1844, 1845, and 1846; Robert Telford in 1847 and 1848; Henry B. Marvin in 1849; and John B. King in 1850.

Frenchtown Township. Pop. 2124.

This Township was one of those re-organized in 1827. The old boundaries were retained, including Ash and Berlin. The first election, in the Spring of 1827, was held at the house of Francois Lasalle, within the limits of the present 4th ward of the city of Monroe. Edmund Littlefield was elected supervisor in 1827, and re-elected in 1828; John B. Cicott in 1829, 1830, and 1831; James J. Godfrey in 1832; Laurent Durocher in 1833 and 1834; Medare Couture in 1835; Warner Wing in 1836. The history of this township is so identified with the early settlement of the county, and the city of Monroe, that further comment is unnecessary. The Township included so much of the present city of Monroe, as lies north of the River Raisin, till 1848, when an act of the Legislature, separated that portion of the city from the township. Laurent Durocher was elected supervisor in 1842, 1843, 1844, 1845, 1846, and 1847; Alfred G. Bates in 1848 and 1849; and Gouverneur Morris in 1850.

Monroe Township. Pop. 927.

This was one of the five townships re-organized in 1837. The boundaries were not changed, and they included so much of the present city of Monroe, as lies south of the River Raisin, till 1848, when the city was set off by itself. The first election, in 1837, was held at Court House, which then stood on the public square, in the village of Monroe, in front of where the Presbyterian Church now stands, on the 23d day of May; there were 52 votes cast; of which Samuel Choate received 49, for supervisor; Edward D. Ellis, 50 for clerk; Jeremiah Lawrence, Joseph G. Navarre, and Samuel Stone, Sr., were elected assessors; Hiram Brown, Dan Mulhollen, and Samuel H. Gale, commissioners; Geo. Alford and Wm. P. Gale, overseers of the poor; Ethel Burch, and James McManus, constables; and James McManus, collector. Of the 52 voters whose names are on the poll-list for 1837, only two are now known to be living—Lyman Harvey and Dan. Mulhollen. Samuel Choate was re-elected supervisor in 1838; Walter Colton elected in 1839 and 1840; Daniel S. Bacon in 1831; Luther Harvey in 1832 and 1833; Edward D. Ellis in 1834; Peter P. Ferry in 1836; Nathan Hubble in 1842; Gerahom T. Bulkley in 1843 and 1844; Norman D. Curtis in 1845; G. T. Bulkley in 1846; N. D. Curtis in 1847; Emerson Choate in 1848 and 1849; and Joseph G. Navarre in 1850.

There is nothing further of note to record, as the history of the township is largely identified with the early settlement, heretofore detailed, and with the city of Monroe. July 9, 1837, there were cast for Delegate to Congress, for Gabriel Richard, 88; Austin E. Wing, 67, and John Biddle, 11 votes. Bedford was settled by the French some 60 years ago, and among the first was Benjamin Soulier, who is still living and a resident of the town. The first American settler, as is supposed, was a man by the name of Owen, who built on section 4, town 9, just in the present limit of the township in 1820. After him a family by the name of Sibley occupied the same house, and traded with the Indians, selling whiskey and other articles. One night they wanted some whiskey, and not having it, they stabbed him. His wife was sick, but got out of bed, and went four miles for assistance. In the meantime, he crawled off, and hid under the military bridge, across Half-Way Creek, where he was found in the morning, when assistance came. He then left, and in 1830 or 1831, Silas Smith settled in the town, on the same farm occupied by Owen and Sibley, took out his patent therefor in the Detroit land office. He moved into his house, December 13th, when the roof was only half completed. The farm has not gone out of the family since it was so patented.

He came on from the State of New York, and purchased what was a portion of the Potter farm in 1823, and went back, returning to Michigan in 1824; cleared off three acres of land, and put it into wheat, from seed brought from the east, and remained until after harvest, in 1825, when he went back to New York and was married, bringing his wife to Michigan immediately; landing at Monroe, Nov. 7, 1825. In 1824, he, with the assistance of George Wilcox, (who had also purchased in 1823,) had built a small log house on his land, in which they kept bachelors hall. After the arrival of Mr. I. and his wife in Michigan, they remained a while in Monroe, and then at the house of Richard Peters, till an addition could be made to the log house built in 1824, and which they took possession of January 11, 1826. George Wilcox boarded with them while working his farm, and in 1827 he built him a house. Joseph Parker had, in 1826, built the house on the road from Dundee to Petersburg. Capt. Richard P. Ingersoll was the first white child born in the present limits of the township. In the fall of 1827, the construction of the dam across the Raisin at Dundee village was commenced, and a saw mill was finished in 1828 and 1829. At the raising, help had to be got at Monroe, Petersburg and Blissfield. The only houses at Dundee were those of Ingersoll and Wilcox. In 1825, the only road from Monroe to what was afterwards Dundee, was up the south side of the Raisin, the same as to Petersburg, where it touched the Raisin opposite Dundee, was a canoe, with which the river was crossed. On this road, the settlers' houses passed were, Gale, Bliss, Burchard, Farewell, Sorter, Diven, Mettes, and several other Frenchmen, whose names are not now recalled. The turnpike from La Plaisance to and through Dundee was laid out in 1832, and the bridge timber across the river at the latter place was got out prior to that as work of private individuals.

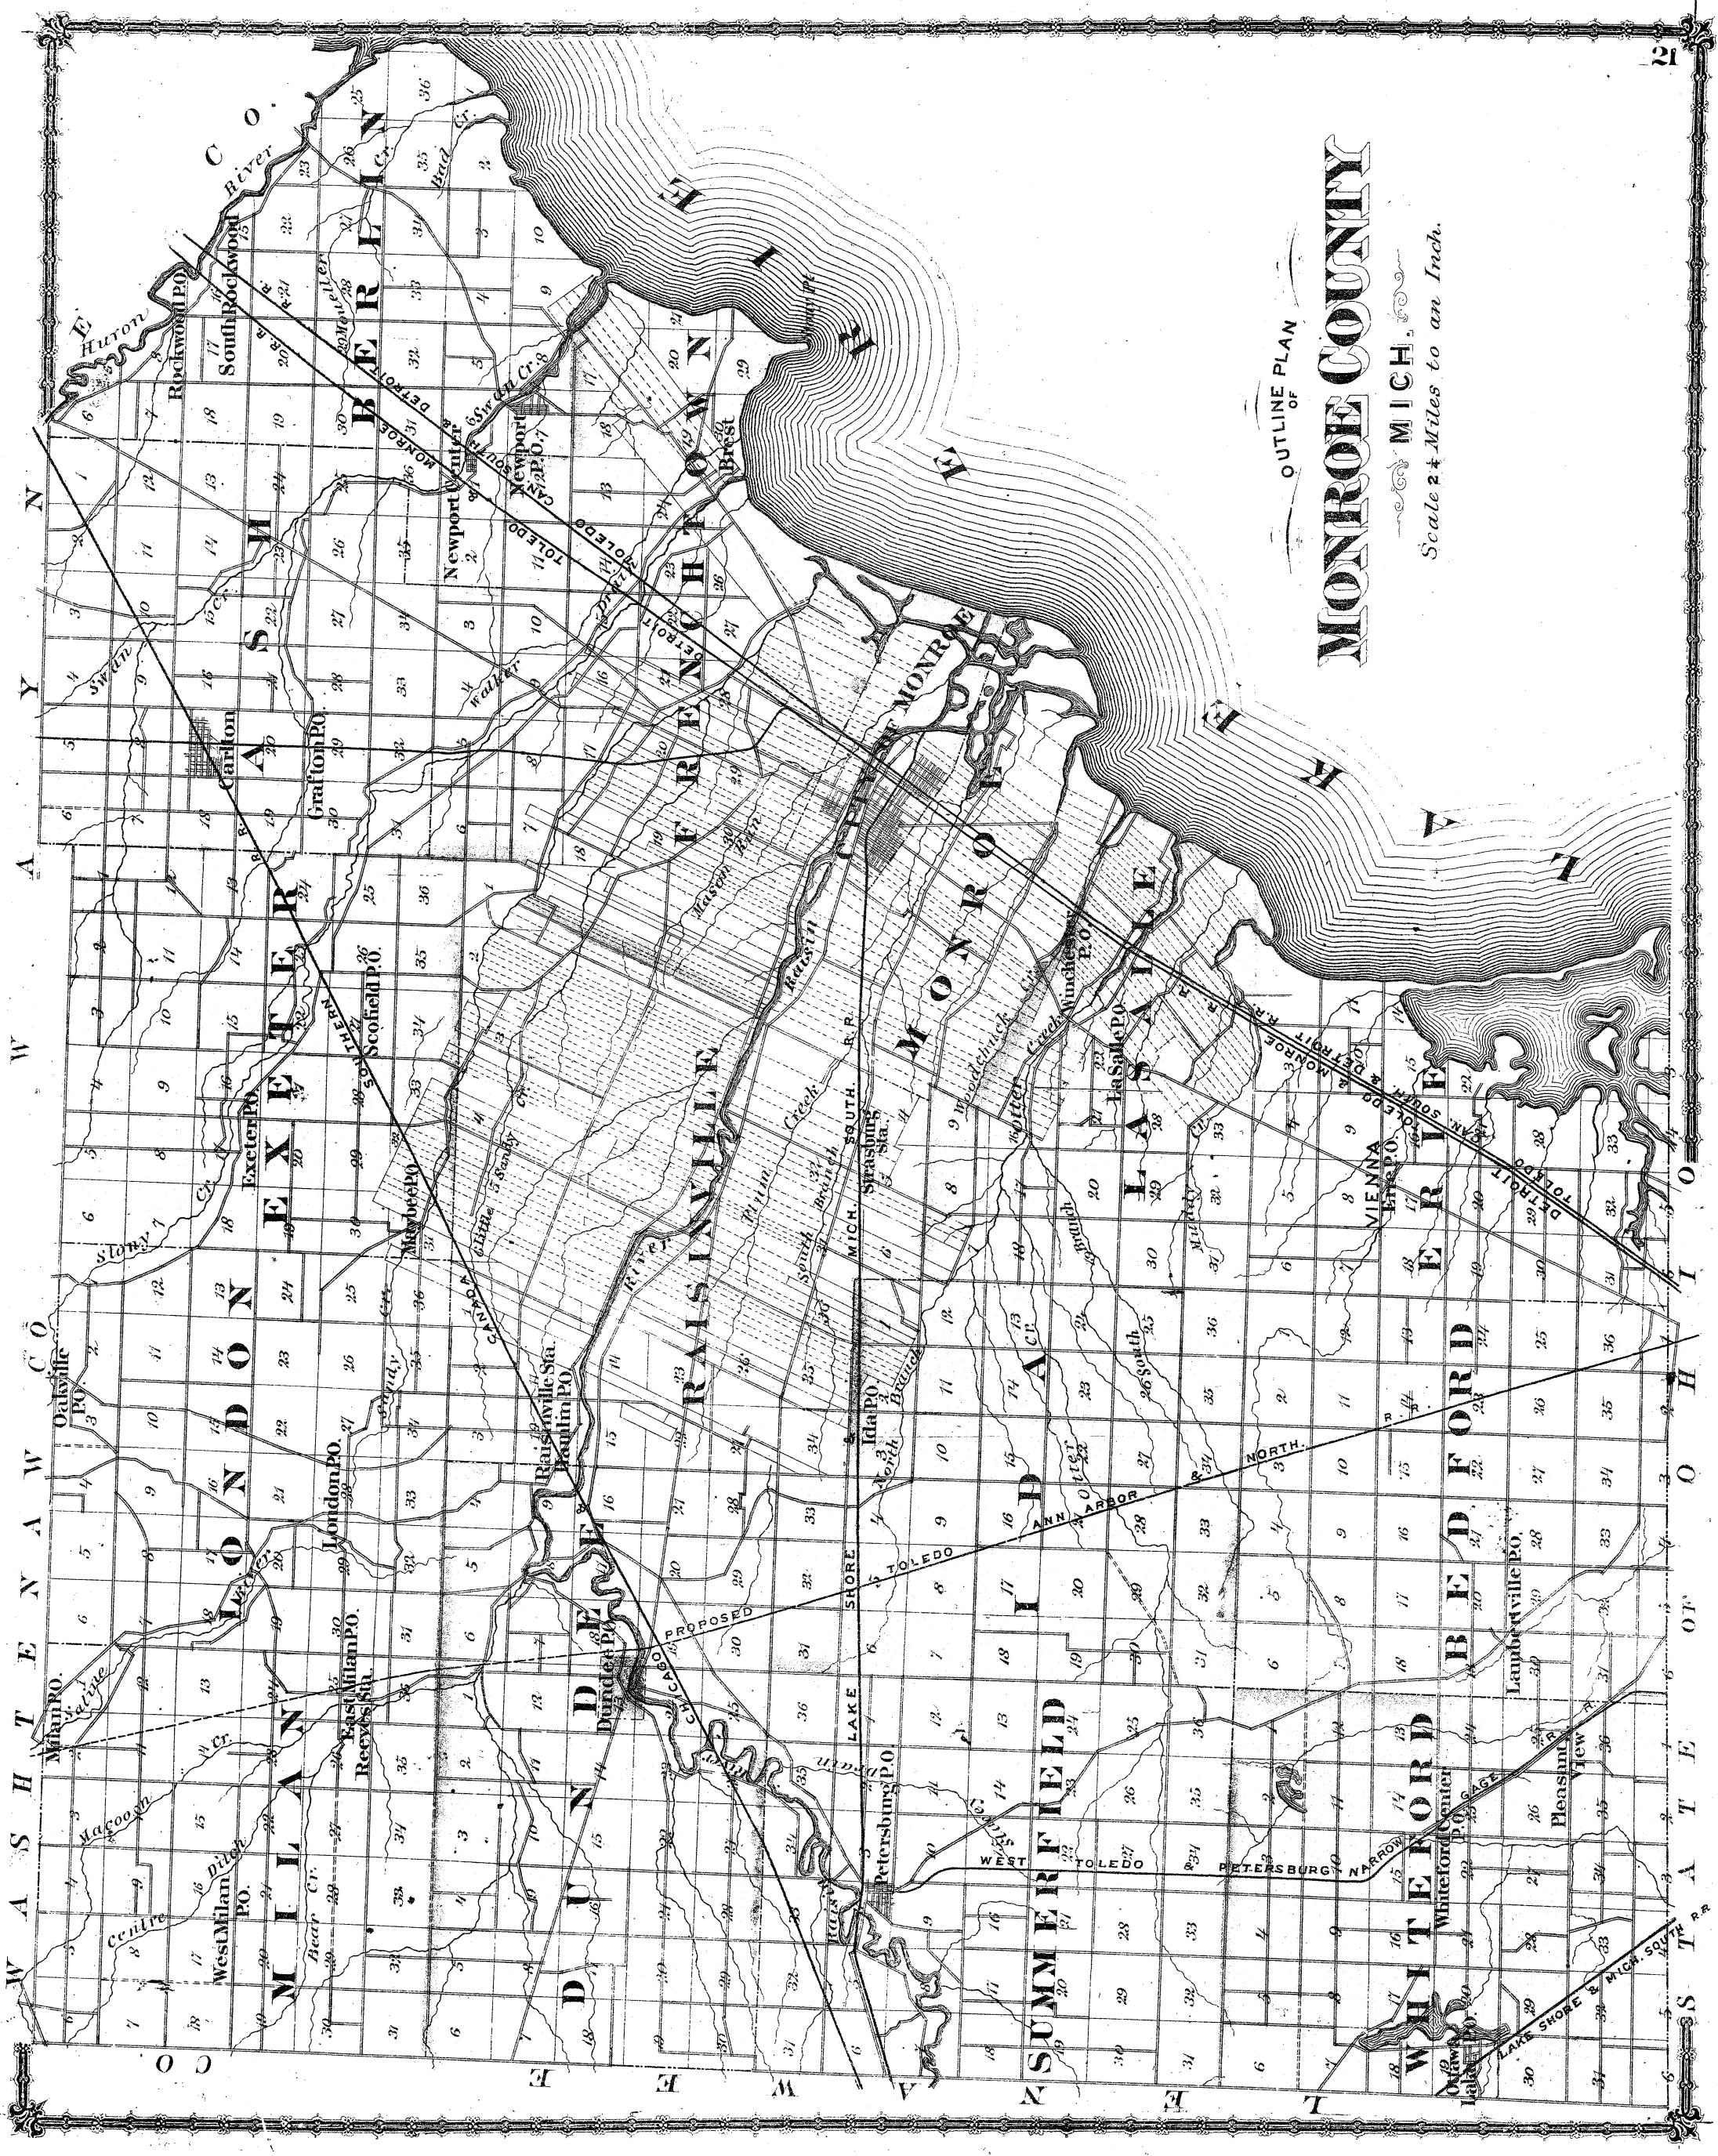

The City of Monroe. Pop. 5752.

The town (village) of Monroe, according to a plan thereof laid out into lots, streets, commons and public squares, on the farm of "Joseph Loranger, and some adjacent ground on the borders of La Riviere aux Raisins," and reported by John Anderson and Wolcott Lawrence, August 11, 1817, to the executive of the territory, was organized and established Sept. 4, 1817, by proclamation of William Woodbridge, Secretary of the Territory, and was made the permanent seat of justice for Monroe county. It was incorporated as a village by regular act of incorporation, April 12, 1827. It was incorporated as a city, March 22, 1837. It had five wards, afterwards three, and now has four.

George B. Harleston was elected Mayor in 1837. J. Q. Adams in 1838. Dan. B. Miller, in 1839 and 1840. Robert McClelland in 1841. Walter P. Clark in 1842. James J. Godfrey in 1843, 1845 and 1846. Township of Berlin. Pop. 2026.

This township constituted a part of the township of Ash, until Dec. 19, 1867, when it was formed by resolutions of the board of supervisors. The supervisors elected, were John Strong, in 1868; Fred. Neidemier, in 1869; W. S. Morey, in 1870; F. Neidemier, in 1871, 1872, 1873, and 1874; and George Bathgate, in 1875 and 1876. William White, and Louis La Due, were the first settlers in the town.
